Tomboy child shocks world and herself as Miss India Worldwide

She has the brains, the beauty and the heart, however although Miss India Worldwide, Tanishq Sharma is the subject of millions of adoring fans all over the world today, when she admitted to her maths teacher in high school that she wanted to be Miss India

The 26 year old budding beauty from Oman said, because her parents never had boys she ended up being raised as one, and this is why her aspirations for beauty pageant stardom astounded her classmates. She admits, she did not even believe it herself when her name was called out as Miss India worldwide on that September night in Mumbai in 2019.

"I remember I was last in queue and at first I didn't come out when they called out my name because I thought they were mistaken. I was so shocked,” she said.

Tanishq went for her first beauty pageant training in 2013 and the journey was no easy fete. She recalls a time at the beginning of her pageant career when she went to India for pageant coaching for three months and survived on a packet of cookies and half a litre of milk every day the entire time she was there because she avoided asking her family for money as she knew they were also struggling.

“My upbringing did not involve any luxury.

Our father was a government employee and in my country that means he did not earn much money. So my childhood was full of struggle, we had restriction on many things because of our limited budget,” said Tanishq.

Our father was a government employee and in my country that means he did not earn much money. So my childhood was full of struggle, we had restriction on many things because of our limited budget,” said Tanishq.

However through hard work and determination Tanishq overcame competing with thousands of Indian- origin beauty queens from over 30 countries all over the world and was crowned Miss India worldwide. She has also pursued a career in Bollywood as she said she realised how people always complimented her on how expressive she was in her speech. After being crowned Miss India Worldwide, Tanishq has travelled all over the world as she had always dreamed and says in as much it has all been filled with wonder and excitement, there have also been some embarrassing and cringe worthy moments. "I was once so tired I fell asleep during an interview, and this one time I got lost in the New Jersey mall. I have also lost a bag at the airport," said Tanishq adding that she considers the pageant organisers Dharmatma Saran Uncle and Neelam Saran Aunty family.

She said becoming Miss India worldwide has instilled a confidence in herself that she never had before as she recognised her self-worth as she stood on podiums all over the world and was celebrated for being who she is.

During her tenure as Miss India worldwide, which has spun over two years due to the Covid-19 pandemic, Tanishq has been advocating for animal care and the safety of women.

"I am a firm believer in humanity, hard work, and the spirit of giving. The world is a beautiful creation by God and we all have a role to play. It is the responsibility of all of us to ensure that all of God's creations lives on this earth in peace and harmony," said Tanishq.

How to manage work stress during the COVID-19 crisis

STRESS and caring for YOURSELF and your TEAM

Book with Heartbeat Training Academy Facilitated

Mr D.H. Maharaj (EPCI)

“Entrepreneurs are used to dealing with unpredictability by now, but with COVID-19 and the 3rd wave, that’s reached a whole new level. A lot of people are grieving certainty right now—struggling with the loss of controlling their stress which indirectly is causing damage to your productivity at the workplace.”

Ways you can take care of your mental health in challenging times. A crisis can make the everyday stresses of running a business even more intense—and bring all kinds of new ones. Fortunately, there are practical steps you can take to manage them and avoid long-term impacts on your mental health.

Stress can be productive—or damaging

Stress isn’t always bad: It can spur people to get things done or inspire them to solve problems in innovative ways. It becomes a cause for concern, however, when it starts to affect a person’s physical, mental or emotional health.

Some of the unhealthy stress signs are trouble sleeping, poor dietary choices and irritability.

“We’re seeing a lot of that unhealthy stress right now. People are isolated and experiencing greater anxiety, and their usual outlets aren’t available to them.”

Left unchecked, persistent elevated stress can lead to acute stress disorder, which can include symptoms of avoidance, dissociation, distress, continuing anxiety and re-experiencing of traumatic events. In some cases, acute stress disorder can lead to full-blown post-traumatic stress disorder, which has serious long-post-traumatic stress disorder, which has serious long-term consequences.

Caring for yourself—and your team

Here are some practical ways to help keep stress in check:

Take action where you can

In times of high stress, it’s natural for people to worry about things they really can’t control: Knowing that people you can’t help are suffering, or that a friend’s businesses won't make it through the crisis. While it's reasonable and compassionate to think about those things, it is recommended not to dwell on them and focus instead on what you can influence, including your own behaviours, actions and words. It's especially important not to blame yourself for things beyond your control. If you find yourself feeling responsible for something you have no influence over, challenge that belief and let it go.

Set boundaries for yourself

Many people seek information about crisis events to feel like they're on top of things, but overdoing it can backfire. Constant updates about a situation you can't do anything about can actually leave you feeling less in control. She suggests setting a limit for how much news or other stressful inputs you'll allow yourself—and sticking to it.

Practice practical empathy

Family, health, finances and other circumstances have significant impacts on how someone experiences a crisis, and everyone has their own unique circumstances we can't always see from the outside. Note that even conventionally good advice, such as sleeping enough, eating well and staying physically active, isn't equally feasible for everyone, as some people may not be in a position to make those choices. "We all are in this together, but that doesn't mean we share the same experience."

It is important to be empathetic, and to demonstrate that empathy in practical and concrete ways, such as adjusting your expectations of productivity and being flexible to meet your team's needs.

Entrepreneurs must extend that practical empathy and kindness to themselves, cutting themselves slack when they don't meet their targets or can't do the things, they're "supposed to."

Ask for help when you need it

While it's important for entrepreneurs to let themselves off hooks sometimes, however if you are finding it persistently difficult to get motivated and engaged, you may be facing a more serious issue and could need some support.

"Entrepreneurs are notorious for not wanting to show weakness and trying to power through stress,"

"But when you start showing signs of unhealthy, disordered stress, it's time to reach out."

I encourage entrepreneurs to be careful not to take on too much of their employees' stress in addition to their own. She recommends pointing them in the direction of useful resources rather than trying to solve their problems for them.

Award winning actress encourages fellow TV stars to pursue business

Award winning actress, and entrepreneur Fundi Zwane is back on our television screens. Her stunning new role as erudite lawyer Lu in multi award winning etv soapie Rhythm City aired for the first time on April 28.

Even though the show has been cancelled and will be airing its final episode in July, Fundi brings her artistic prowess to a new level as she enamours audiences with her delivery of the role so notably disparate from her previous role in Imbewu the Seed over the past three years.

“Playing Lu has been great because she has a completely different DNA, she rocks heels to work and speaks in corporate and legal jargon, which has been a switch for me because I’ve spent the last three years playing a rural mama, so it’s been a transformation. I take my time to enjoy each character I play and how each is uniquely nuanced,” said Fundi.

The 'rural mama' she played on Imbewu earned her a SAFTA and thousands of adoring fans who still affectionately refer to her by her stage name "Donsi". Her performance of the character was studied and meant different things for Fundi as an artist with each season, she said.

"In 2018, it meant establishing a sound character, 2019 was about pushing myself artistically with Donsi in terms of her emotional depth and ability to deliver a wide range of variable emotions convincingly leading us to 2020 where the strategy was to really push the boundaries of biometric data on what I was capable of delivering on set with regards to time," said Fundi.

"Business gives me my own language and an avenue to make sense of my world, my way. It also breeds integrity and accountability which is something that's stood me in good stead along the journey,"

The acting bug bit the South Coast girl while leading a gumboots dance performance with a group of friends while in Grade 10 at Port Shepstone High School. Her experience in the performance and the reception from the audience coupled with encouragement from her drama teachers Lynn Raymond and Anita Schönauer activated a very important aspect of her art, she said.

The Umtentweni born girl said growing up in a small town was 'warm and communal'. She said the small town was exciting as there was always something to look forward to in terms nous context allowed for me to be closely raised by most members of the family and it helped me understand that human beings are textured differently," said Fundi.

Even after having been in the public eye for such a long time, Fundi has managed to live a relatively private personal life. She said she curates the parts of herself that she wants to share with the world including travel, product marketing and parenting.

One of the latest products that Fundi is marketing is her own perfume brand Camagu, a brand she said was inspired by the beginning of a new journey unfolding in

of its growth. "The beauty of growing up in a small town that still has strong ties to its African indigenous context allowed for me to be closely raised by most members of the family and it helped me understand that human beings are textured differently," said Fundi.

Even after having been in the public eye for such a long time, Fundi has managed to live a relatively private personal life. She said she curates the parts of herself that she wants to share with the world including travel, product marketing and parenting.

One of the latest products that Fundi is marketing is her own perfume brand Camagu, a brand she said was inspired by the beginning of a new journey unfolding in her life.

"Choosing the notes for the fragrance was an intimate experience which took a while because I understood that it's a part of me that a person gets to experience just as they would my acting, so it's been great for us to put in the hard yards of putting in the business foundations and it's also been exciting for me to explore the e-commerce space because it revolutionised how I'm able to get Camagu to people on their doorstep," said Fundi.

As proficient entrepreneur, Fundi has encouraged other artist to pursue various forms of business avenues for their own security and growth.

"Business gives me my own language and an avenue to make sense of my world, my way. It also breeds integrity and accountability which is something that's stood me in good stead along the journey," said Fundi.

She said although running your business was admittedly no money for old rope, and was also especially difficult due to the Covid-19 pandemic it was important to have something that one can have ownership of and generate an income from.

"I'm very thankful to my ancestors to be born in this time where expression and breaking of norms that don't serve us are chucked out the window. I'm bald and bold and I'm a woman. I synergise with companies that embrace my unique individuality," said Fundi.

She said business has taught her the importance of who she is and her unique skillset as well as the power of fruitful collaboration as the best business comes from healthy business relationships.

"If I could advise us all as citizens of Port Shepstone, it is that we need to start an Arts and Entertainment culture. Our town is already a tourist destination, it's now about finding ways to merge those two areas of commerce. We've seen other small towns do it with great success," said Fundi.

SUCCESS IS CRUCIAL – Managing Your Life and Business in a Vuca World

AUTHOR: VANI MOODLEY -
CHIEF EXECUTIVE VANI MOODLEY & ASSOCIATES (PTY) LTD.

Despite the challenging economic environment, success (business, professional and personal) is essential for survival. Managing your life on a new level sounds simple, but it is extremely complex. We find ourselves in what we may term the VUCA (Volatile, Uncertain, Complex and Ambiguous) World.

VUCA is an acronym (artificial word), first used in 1987 and is based on the leadership theories of Warren Bennis and Burt Nanus. It was the response of the United States Army War College to the collapse of the USSR in the early 1990s. The deeper meaning of each element of VUCA serves to enhance the strategic significance of VUCA in the context of the current, future, analysis, and interpretation of the behaviour of groups, teams and individuals in organisations/business.

V = Volatility: The nature and dynamics of change, and the nature and speed of change forces and change catalysts. This element is emphasised by the level of social and political unrest and significant social conflict being experienced by many.

Whilst we have seen global examples of people pulling together, there has also been significant unrest across the world that directly affects entire communities. There is political volatility and extensive dispute and conflict around specific events in 2020/2021 which has left many feeling vulnerable, judged, and powerless.

U = Uncertainty: The lack of predictability, the prospect for surprise, and the sense of awareness and understanding of issues and events. The uncertainty is emphasised by the pandemic and level of unknown elements associated with the virus. With the bombardment of updates around COVID-19 and constant change in relation to different steps being taken to protect people from the virus, there remains significant uncertainty as to when things will return to normal and indeed, what normal will look like. This uncertainty can be extremely disruptive and leave many feeling unstable.

C = Complexity: The multiplex of forces, the confounding of issues, no cause- and-effect chain and confusion that surrounds organisation. Here we emphasise the impact of the sheer complexity of the events of 2020 and how our entire lives have been interrupted. From how we work, how we socialise, how we exercise, how we do business to how we shop! Everything has changed. The complexity of this is that everyone is very different in the specific challenges they face, which can make it difficult to know how best to access support and help and leave many feeling isolated and alone.

A = Ambiguity: The haziness of reality, the potential for misreads, and the mixed meanings of conditions, cause-and-effect confusion. The ambiguous nature of the current economy, both locally and globally has been emphasised above. There is much speculation around the economy and what this will mean for individuals and business, which can leave people feeling threatened, fearful, vulnerable, more at risk of burnout, as they are striving to prove their value in an ambiguous economy especially when there are concerns of stability and security, both in the present and future.

The concise meaning and relation often relates to how people view the conditions under which they make decisions, plan forward, manage risks, foster change, and solve problems.

From this perspective, managers, professionals, and business owners need to consider these different elements and how their people may be facing very different thoughts and feelings in relation to this VUCA world, and as such, demonstrate very different behaviours in response. Whilst a manager, or business owner cannot change many of the issues faced, by intentionally considering the factors that affect staff and teams, and encouraging them to share openly, it is possible to provide the right support in the right way to ensure a form of stability and reassurance in this VUCA world.

People before profit is an important philosophy to consider. If you take care of your people, they will take care of your productivity and profit.

Remember to take care of yourself at the same time. By continually expending energy and focus to assist others, be sure to refuel to sustain yourself with balance. Manage your own energy levels, physical and mental health, and wellness.

NOT A TIME TO DOUBT, HAVE FAITH

By Christopher Bongo

You would think, after all that we know about ourselves and all that we have been told about the power we possess to change our circumstances, we wouldn't ask; why is it difficult for us to be happy?

There must be something that stops us from taking the "leap" into the direction we want.

There are a lot of people who struggle to change their live circumstances because they lack faith to change their thought process.

What is faith? Why is faith so important to us? How do we develop faith?

When we look up the definition of the word faith, we can better understand the difference between what we know and taking action.

Faith is defined as "having a complete trust.

My view of faith is a scientific one, I define Faith as our internal Chemical lab where we mix our thoughts and our energy to produce an instant emotion. The mixture then gets translated it into spiritual sensation that most humans conclude as God's will.

Have you ever said... "This is my faith." What do you mean by that?

Unconsciously, you are saying, it is God's will, it is God's choice for you.

Right?

Do you know why you say so?

Since birth, you have been told so many times that, there is a God, and he has a plan for your life. This has been repeated to you on various occasions and it has become your belief.

I am sure you have experienced something in your life that you attributed to the power of God's will, or have at least used that expression.

What you meant then is that, you have "complete trust" in God.

Now, can you say truly that, you trust you?

Do we have faith that we have the ability to change our life situation?

It is evident that we need to learn to develop a "complete trust" in our abilities in order to obtain our desires.

Faith is a state of mind, created by affirming instructions to the unconscious mind, using repeated suggestion.

We have to follow our thoughts with a definite plan until we produce our desire.

In his book published in 1900, Napoleon Hill wrote "The method in which one develops faith, where it does not already exist, is extremely difficult to describe. It is like explaining colour to someone who was born blind never seen colour."

Faith is a state of mind that you could develop at will after you have received your first desired wish.

Repetition and the affirmation of orders to your sub-conscious mind is the only known method of voluntarily developing the emotion of faith.

When people first come in contact with crime, they abhor it. If they remain in contact with crime for some time, they become accustomed to it, and endure it. And if they remain in touch with it for long enough, they will embrace it and become influenced by it. Therefore any thought process passed on to the sub-conscious mind repeatedly is first accepted, before it is embraced, and eventually acted upon.

In connection with this, consider again the statement, all thoughts which have been given life (emotion-alised), and mixed with faith begin immediately to translate themselves into their physical equivalent or counterpart.

The emotion or feeling portion of our thoughts are the factor of which give thought vitality, life and action. The emotion of faith, love and sex when mixed with thought, impulse, give it greater action than any these emotions can do singly.

From this statement, you will realise, the subconscious mind would translate into its physical equivalent a thought impulse of a negative or destructive nature just as readily as it will act upon though impulses of positive or constructive nature.

There are many people in the world who feel doom to poverty and they believe it is due to strange force and they don't have control over it. The fact is, they are the creator of their own misfortunes, because of their negative belief. Which is pick up by their unconscious mind. Your belief becomes your faith and it is the key element which determine the outcome of your life.

There is nothing hinder you from deceiving your subconscious mind when giving it the instruction about life, unless you don't know you have power of it. To make the decision more realistic, you need to behave as if you are already in possession of the material thing that you are demanding when you call upon your subconscious mind.

Faith is the element that transforms the ordinary vibration of thought, create by the finite mind of man into the spiritual equivalent. It is the starting point of all accumulation of good or bad results. Faith is the only antidote of failure and the agency through which the cosmic forces of finite intelligence can be harnessed and used by man.

But you who read this, you will have hard proof of what I am saying.

It is no secret that we come to believe in whatever we repeat to ourselves, regardless of the trueness of the statement repeated. For example, if you are in abusive relationship but you keep repeating to yourself that "it is okay" or, "it will be okay," you will remain in that abusive relationship and embrace it as "okay".

We all in a sphere where our mind is constantly attracting vibrations which harmonise with that which dominates it.

The application of this principle may be made through a simple arrangement of positive thoughts impulses stated in writing, memorised or repeated until they become a part of the working equipment of your unconscious mind.

Negative thoughts don't need repeating or effort. When we have negative thoughts, our mind does the evaluation, we then quickly come to the realisation that the biggest threat against our better self is nothing else but self-confidence that we create via our environment.

When we manage to get into the mind and consciously repeat to ourselves aloud each day, with full believe, we will start influencing our actions so that we become self reliant.

Knowing how to use one's conscious mind is essential.

Even though like many other things, self-confidence can be destroyed, it can also be built. We just need to know how.

The starting point is to accept that you have been created fully capable of achieving whatever others have achieved. We were made by and of the same source and the source didn't discriminate against some in creation.

Once we have agreed on that, we will then accept, all our imperfection are caused by our actions, our thoughts; and if we chose to transform them the same way as we accumulated them, we will change the outcome.

Thoughts are powerful things when they are mixed with purpose and burning desire.

The results that we get is not achieved instantaneously. It comes from repetitive thinking.

First when the thought appear to us, our inaction is often been influenced by two perceived challenges 1:- Not knowing how the end of our initial action would be make it difficult for us to start, and 2:- We don't act because we decide that, we don't have the means to start.

Both are just thoughts and powerful enough to discourage any individual from taking action by going through they thinking.

Failure is not a result of our action, once we act, we can't fail, only feedbacks. Failure is a result of doing nothing (lack of action) or stops doing what we have started (giving up).

And this is the domain of commoners. We have to lust for success.

Five Reasons why you need Life insurance

Tasleem Shaik

Especially during this time, please do not be without it!!! Insurance can be confusing and it's hard to know what you really need or want. But here are five very good reasons why you need life insurance.

As we grow older, get married, build families and start businesses, we come to realize more and more that life insurance is a fundamental part of having a sound financial plan. Depending on your type of policy, life insurance is fairly cheap, which means there's no excuse not to get coverage now. Plus, over the years, you'll find comfort in knowing money will be available to protect your loved ones in the event of your passing. Here are a few other reasons why having life insurance is important.

TO PROTECT YOUR FAMILY AND LOVED ONES

If your loved ones depend on your financial support for their livelihood, then life insurance is a must, because it replaces your income when you die. This is especially important for parents of young children or adults who would find it difficult to sustain their standard of living if they no longer had access to the income provided by their partner. You will also need to provide enough money to cover the costs of hiring someone to cover the day-to-day household tasks, like cleaning, laundry, cooking, childcare and everything else a growing family needs.

What's wrong with this picture?

You currently have insurance on:

AUTO	HOME	JEWELLERY
$30,000	$150,000	$10,000

FAMILY
$0.00

YOU'LL INSURE THINGS THAT ARE REPLACEABLE
BUT NOT YOUR FAMILY ?

How to determine if you need a Financial Adviser:

- Can you manage your investments on your own?
- In the present financial climate, you are adequately insured?
- Do you know how tax regulations affect you?
- Do you stick to your set budget?
- Do you have a will?

#AdvantageofKnowing

TO LEAVE AN INHERITANCE

Even if you don't have any other assets to pass to your heirs, you can create an inheritance by buying a life insurance policy and naming them as beneficiaries. This is a great way to set your kids up for a solid financial future and provide for any monetary needs that will arise.

TO PAY OFF DEBTS AND OTHER EXPENSES

In addition to providing income to cover everyday living expenses, your family needs insurance to cover any outstanding debts, like the mortgage, credit cards and car loans. Other expenses include funeral and burial costs that can easily run into the tens of thousands of dollars. You don't want your spouse, parents, children or other loved ones to be left with any extra financial burden in addition to the emotional burden they're already suffering.

TO ADD MORE FINANCIAL SECURITY

Like most parents you probably want to know your kids will be well taken care of when you're gone. You not only want them to get a quality college education, but to provide for other life ventures like getting married or starting a business. For this reason, additional coverage is absolutely essential while your kids are still at home.

TO BRING PEACE OF MIND

We can't know when we'll pass away. It could be today, tomorrow or 50 years from now, but it will happen eventually. No amount of money could ever replace a person. But more than anything, life insurance can help provide protection for the uncertainties in life. Without a doubt, having life insurance coverage will bring you and your family peace of mind. It's one thing you can be sure of and you'll no longer have to question whether they'll be taken care of when you're gone. Life insurance protects your heirs from the unknown and helps them through an otherwise difficult time of loss.

Becoming Self-Aware the start to Awesomeness

Many years ago a friend suggested I join her at a Louise Hay weekend workshop. New on the self-awareness journey & very eager to learn, I said “Yes!”

Unaware until the end of the weekend, in an absolute emotional state, did I become aware what state I truly was in. I came to realise that all my life, I had hidden my hurt & pain, compensated my emotional needs with food, unhealthy thoughts, addiction to work with an additional 30kg of weight.

As much as I felt alone & lost, I was not. I became more self-aware & aware of all the support around me, people I knew or strangers who crossed my path, the synchronicities in life. It felt as if my life was on this incredible and intense journey of experiencing, learning and discovery.

Learning to forgive myself and those I gave my power away to and creating fluid boundaries was a big learning. The hunger within to understand and overcome my patterns grew and I started attending various workshops and studied many healing and training modalities.

I started to notice that every person was in some way a reflection of me and I started to look for the aspects I needed to learn from and how to create new healthier behaviours.

My early learning was to step back and observe, reflect and journal my thoughts, sense the guidance from within, be present and patient before I did anything. This was challenging, as I was not patient at all.

I came to realise that this journey was instrumental in shaping my life and purpose, in order to understand the pain and behaviours us humans perceive and experience.

The important step is to acknowledge to yourself, you are more than what you seem to be or think you are and that your experiences of the past do not dictate your future potential. We have the ability to create a better version of ourselves at any point.

Honouring your feelings, making time for yourself and reflecting on your values and purpose, are important to flow through life. Listen and allow your inner guidance system (your true north) to guide you. Too often in today's fast paced world, our focus is on the external world and not enough on our internal world. Everything you need is within.

Today, I listen tentatively to what my inner guidance system senses, what my business and home requires, both living organisms with a heart and a soul in partnership with me. Did you know your business and home has a heart? Did you know it also has feelings? When last did you listen to your business or home? When last have you actually asked what they need from you? We are more connected emotionally to our homes and businesses than we may realise

My transformational and empowerment journey began when I took that first step. It is never as scary as our mind's think.

Are you ready to take that step?

Having Legal recourse as an SMME

Experiencing unfair trading practices as an SMME?

BY NIVITA MAHARAJ

The National Small Enterprise Amendment Bill is aimed at regulating small, medium and micro-enterprises (SMME) sector in South Africa.

Small businesses play a critical role in our economy and development objectives however, SMME's continue to be exposed to exploitation resulting in them being unable to make use of legal remedies which are available to them, due to remedial costs which prohibits SMME's to take further action.

SMME's must be sure to be made aware the service of the Ombudsman as same is an essential instrument which enforces contracts of the SMME sector and further aids in resolving business-to-business disputes. The Ombud service further considers and discards complaints which are made by small enterprises in relation to the interpretation of the terms of an agreement for the procurement of goods, services or late and non-payment of amounts due and payable to small enterprises.

The bill is there to assist SMME's in handling complaints against them in a manner which is considered as procedurally fair, economical and expeditious. As such, the bill will determine as to what is equitable in all circumstances, with due regard to the contractual arrangement or other legal relationship between the complainant and any other party to the complaint.

As per the regulations of the bill, the ombudsman may make ruling in favor of small businesses, including monetary awards for any financial prejudice or damage suffered.

Manage Change in a Growing Organisation

BY RESHMA MAHARAJ

One of the most difficult and critical factors of success for change is a business's capacity and willingness to support and adapt new ways of doing things. Many studies suggest that project failures do not occur during the technical implementation but rather during the introduction of new practices. Include designated resources for programme and change management within your transformation. Ensure that you understand the impact of the changes from the introduction of new technologies and ways of working and provide a programme to help mitigate these.

Encourage adoption through a programme of communication, initially on the reasons for change with messages being refined to more specific "what does this mean to me" towards the go-live date, and training. Make sure that the business leadership are clear and vocal in their support for the change, staff take their lead from your leaders.

Monitor adoption of the changes through process metrics and consider how you will deal with leakage away from new processes.

Build a viable digital foundation

It is common to hear of businesses that once thrived but are now closing. Often it is because the dynamics of their industry shifted and they just failed to respond, or, didn't respond early enough.

Organisations must continue to review, reflect and build their digital foundations, to incorporate the necessary people, processes, data and technologies to stay relevant and competitive. This is therefore not a once-off implementation, but a change to culture to embrace continuous reflection, disruption to markets, and improvements.

Conclusion

The business environment is changing quickly – customer and employee expectations are evolving, the need for immediate actionable data is more important for more effective decision-making. Change is no longer linear but now exponential and therefore a new focus on technology is required.

Although new technologies are now affordable and available to mid-market businesses and can be harnessed to create new opportunities for growth, businesses must take a structured approach to map out their path.
